WITH THE WOMEN OF TODAY

Miss Clara B. Fishbaugh of Cockeysville, Md., owns a quaint old seal for the marking of love letters which was once the property of a queen of France, the wife of Louis XV. A mother of pearl handle holds a framework of gilded metal. Within the frame is a wheel which turns freely, and on the wheel are placed six different semi-precious stones, with the seals cut in them. The lady using the seal might mark her letter with the figure of a dove bearing a note in its beak and the words "Amor vincit omnia."

Shrimati Luxai Devione, one of the Stanchest women followers of Mahatma Gandhi, leader in the Hindu freedom movement, will accompany Ishwarlal Sogani, a prominent merchant of Japur, India, on his trip to Philadelphia to attend the Sesqui-centennial exposition. There she will give a picturesque exhibition of spinning yarn from cotton upon the spinning wheel invented by Gandhi. Although a member of one of the highest Rajput families, she will wear the simplest clothes, of the roughest homespun cloth, in order to indicate the sacrifices the Indian women are making in the Gandhi cause.

BLACK LACE

By MME. LISBETH
(Central Press Fashion Authority)
The longer length skirt for formal wear is illustrated in this black lace dress which is posed over flesh voile and is intended for wear at a garden party. The pattern of the lace is utilized as the only trimming with a sash-like drape falling from the left side. American chintilly lace is used for the gown and also for the attractive hat accompanying it.

In reviewing the current fashions sponsored by smart women the favor for combinations of dark and light color is important. Black and white, black with pinky beiges and flesh and light and dark blue are some of the combinations. Sheer silks are in the vogue for afternoon and evening fashions. Prints, particularly chiffon and georgette floral types, are increasingly popular. Large Milan hats are becoming more important in the millinery styles. Coral sands is reported the most popular of the special summer colors.

At a smart evening function recently one woman appeared wearing a small dance hat with her pink chiffon evening gown. The hat was a bonnet shaped model of silver lace over a lining of pink chiffon with a turn-down narrow brim wired at the edge. The lace was cut to fit the shape, while the chiffon was gathered and held in place by a narrow band of silver ribbon tied around the crown.
